 [Document Abstract Number (1120.03.03)]
 [Abstract Summary by Taun Toay: Minsky begins by saying that economics is a useful and exciting discipline and then expands on his reasoning. He cites the Great Depression and actions taken by the Federal Government. He then describes the Keynesian "The General Theory". Minsky looks at how the labor market functions, from both the Keynesian and neo-classical perspectives. Minsky states that in a capitalistic economy, output is supplied as a byproduct of the pursuit of making profits. Minsky describes a theory according to which prices do not change much for some range of aggregate demands relative to aggregate supply. Prices tend to increase if "Ap" exceeds some level and tend to fall if "Ap" falls below some level. He describes the Hanson Model and also states that income is "K" times investment and government spending, where "K", in simplest expositions is the marginal propensity to save. Minsky, then, describes Hick's formalization of Keynes' The General Theory and analyses it. Minsky also describes Hicks' IS-LM Model. He then discusses the Patinkin Resolution. Towards the end, Minsky berates the neo-classical economists and backs up his arguments with examples and evidences.]

 [Document Abstract Number (1120.03.04)]
 [Abstract Summary by Taun Toay: Using Irving Fisher's debt-deflation model as a template for discussing Keynes. Minsky traces the nine steps and their application to today's society. Over-indebtedness leads to: 1.) debt liquidation and distressed selling; 2.) contraction of checkbook money; 3.) a fall in the level of prices; 4.) a still greater fall in the net worth's of businesses; 5.) a like fall in profits; 6.) a reduction in output, in trade, and in employment; 7.) pessimism and loss of confidence; 8.) Hoarding and slowing down still more of the velocity of circulation; 9.) complicated disturbances in the rate of interest.]

 [Abstract Summary by Taun Toay: This paper was written amidst a turbulent period in the U.S. economy. The first quarter of the fiscal year showed no prosperity, however, the second quarter was promising. Minsky believes that this prosperous trend will not continue. Traumatic events such as the hijacking of TWA Flight 847 in June 1985, and subsequent hostage crisis, do have economic consequences. Minsky discusses the economic problems, which might arise as a result of this particular incident and also acknowledges the ineptness of the current economists in the Federal Government. Minsky believes that a depression in the U.S. economy is imminent, but that it will not be as severe as the Great Depression.]

Not For Quotation Or Imputation. Comments Welcome. [1 typed original, 2 copies]
 [Abstract Summary by Taun Toay: Author proposes "Financial Keynesian" approach as a buttress against the attacking fronts of the Monetarists and (although Minsky does not name the second school) a group devoted to highlighting the illegitimacy of Keynesianism -likely Lucas. Note: author does not discuss how his model differs from other post-Keynesian works.
 Author casts "Financial Keynesianism" as institutional economics with seven assumptions distinguishing it:
 1.) it is a Capitalist economy; 2.) there is a fractional reserve banking system; 3.) a complex, layered network of financial institutions and money flows exists; 4.) markets exist for real and financial assets as well as for commodities and services and trading in these assets does take place; 5.) The economy has a history of business cycles and financial crises and decision makers either know their history or have a memory; 6.) various market organizations and conventions exist which affect how price mechanism operates; 7.) There may be a government.
 Author asserts that existing models ignore the direct cash flow impacts of financial and banking commitments. The bulk of the paper is then spent examining current modeling of the budget constraints that determine Aggregate Demand.]

 [Abstract Summary by Taun Toay: "Success does not bring a good society." Author expresses distaste for the status quo of theory and application thereof. Arranged into seven sections: I. Introduction; II. An Aside on the Neoclassical Synthesis; III. Economic Theory and Economic Performance; IV. Marshall versus Pareto; V. Marxism; VI. Keynesian Economics; VII. Conclusion - current shortcomings reflect: 1.) Modern theory takes a narrow view of man's needs a Paretian view. 2.) Neoclassical wedding to analysis fails to consider income distribution "or even proper borders between private and public sectors." 3.) Narrow view of Keynes inhibits great policy potential.]

[Abstract Summary by Taun Toay: Article is incomplete (pages 1, 2, 8, 9). The Non-Accelerating Inflation Rate Of Unemployment (NAIRU) has muddled the full employment debate. Current discussions on unemployment assume expansionary policies - fiscal and monetary solely impact unemployment. Whereas, a WPA/NYA/CCC approach directly affects the wage incomes of those employed. This is followed by secondary effects that mimic generalized increases in Aggregate Demand (AD), similar to a tax decrease. The author discusses calculation of inflation/NAIRU. NAIRU is a "slippery creature." Accelerating inflation is neither a dire threat nor an inevitability in a full employment economy.]
