WALTER R. WAGGONER

According to all reports, the coming "40th" birthday of The Bardian will be observed, in a sense, by a number of articles on the subject distributed on the front pages of today's morning newspapers and a series of timely and other articles on the subject distributed on the front pages of today's morning newspapers and a series of timely and other articles on the subject. The editors of The Bardian have undertaken this project with the purpose of forwarding the anniversary of The Bardian in the best possible manner.

The Bardian is the oldest newspaper in the nation, and serves as the official organ of the Bard College community. It was founded in 1894 and has been published continuously since then. The Bardian covers news and events of interest to the Bard College community, including campus life, local and national news, and other topics of interest. The Bardian is distributed to all students, faculty, and staff of Bard College, as well as to alumni and friends of the college.

The Bardian is produced by student editors and writers, who are selected by an independent panel of judges. The Bardian is not affiliated with Bard College or any other institution, and is governed by its own board of directors.

The Bardian is supported by advertising revenue, donations, and subscriptions. Subscriptions are available online or by mail.

The Bardian is distributed weekly during the academic year, and bi-weekly during the summer months. The Bardian is available online at bardian.org.

Suggest Cutting Intercollegiate Games This Year

Sports Committee Urges

The University of Pennsylvania, which was one of the leading universities in the country in terms of athletic activities, has decided to cut back on its intercollegiate sports program. This decision was made in response to pressure from the students and the faculty, who were concerned about the cost of maintaining such a large sports program.

The committee on athletics, which was responsible for overseeing the sports program, met earlier this week to discuss the issue. After much deliberation, they agreed to recommend a reduction in the number of intercollegiate sports offered by the university.

The recommended cuts would affect both men's and women's teams. The committee noted that while the university had a long history of success in intercollegiate sports, the costs of maintaining such programs were becoming increasingly difficult to justify.

As a result, the committee recommended that the university focus on developing more intramural and club sports, which would be less expensive to operate. They also urged the university to explore alternative ways of funding the athletic department, such as through partnerships with local businesses or by charging more fees for participation in intramural sports.

The university administration is expected to make a final decision on the matter in the coming weeks.
POLITICS COURSE OFFERED AT BARD FOR FIRST TIME

English Class to Study Social Angle in Literature

Among the new courses to be offered at Bard this year will be an English class to study the social angle in literature. Although Dr. Carlson Quasey is scheduled to conduct the class, it is planned to invite other faculty members to participate in some of the discussions and also ask outsiders to attend the first session or two to speak to the group. This course, together with the introductory class in politi- cal science, is the first step in a political study plan to be given at Bard.

Mr. George Granger will have a new English course this year, starting American literature mainly since the Civil War, the class will attempt, willy-nilly, to approach American social history through the writings of American authors. Other courses in English will be offered as electives, and the English department also plans to offer a course in German literature along the same lines as the German course already offered.

Mr. Granger will give a course in German literature, and Mr. Robert St. John will give a course in English literature. The course in German literature will be offered for the first time this year.

Mr. Granger is planning a course in American literature that will cover the period from the Civil War to the present. The course will cover the major authors of the period, including Mark Twain, Henry David Thoreau, and Walt Whitman.

Mr. Granger is also planning a course in American history that will cover the period from the Civil War to the present. The course will cover the major events of the period, including the Civil War, the Reconstruction, and the progress of the United States in the 20th century.

Mr. Granger is also planning a course in American politics that will cover the period from the Civil War to the present. The course will cover the major political events of the period, including the Civil War, the Reconstruction, and the progress of the United States in the 20th century.
