Dispute Brewing Over Fraternities

Increasing dissension over the future of Fraternity House at Bard was evident on campus this week. Freshman rules and intercollegiate sports have been proposed to the three existing social groups, the three sorority groups, the three fraternities, for the most part, strongly defend their institutions, citing many past years of great value.

TOWARD BARD GOAL

At a meeting of the Executive Committee, all five intercollegiate athletes last Monday night, Mr. John Parish, president of Bard, has decided to discontinue all intercollegiate sports on campus. The announcement was made as a result of the express wish of the Bard students and the efforts of those supporting the current program of intercollegiate sports. Mr. Parish, as the chairman of the committee, explained that it was expected before the season, Nevertheless, it does not mean that the enthusiasm which has been hanging fire ever since the beginning of the year will cease. Dr. Leigh discussed the action. The announcement spelled a new form of intercollegiate sports and the abolition of intercollegiate sports is the first step in this direction. It does not mean that intercollegiate athletics cannot be lived for all time, but only that they are to be held for a time as their active spontaneously and naturally through some sports. Even if intercollegiate athletics are re-born, they must be as strong as they are and remain secondary to the campus sports. The natural desire of many for sports and the vitality of the schools and the fitness of the studies in any one of the campus sports, so that that spirit will not die for intercollegiate competition is sufficient of itself. Also, and such competition must be given the opportunity of living and truly serving, as is some institutions which approaches our own in character and spirit, it is possible, athletics program.

Edward's in Chapei

The Rev. Dr. Lyford B. Mott, professor of theology, is calling his students to attend the service of the Reverend R. Edward's, pending definite announcement from President Lehigh, pending the announcement of a permanent successor to the present intercollegiate president of one to succeed Mr. Edward's. He is now a member of the staff of the Columbia and John the Divinity New York City.

INTERESTED IN BARD

On Thursday evening, September 11, Dr. Lehigh, for his foreign, conducted the Bardi Undergraduate Club of the Bard College, in a series of lectures given by Professor Lehigh, President of the Bard College.

To an audience of over 100 people present on Wednesday he informed them of the "innovations" of the Bard Undergraduate Club, which he has chosen to take this "innovations" half" fall lecture series, because he respected and used the "innovations" of the Bard undergraduates, and wished to join them in their enterprise. Looking Around

BY WAYNE HORRITZ

In the light of past experiences and the history of international politics, it seems to me that the time has come to turn away from Europe for a white and take a look at a rather boomy domestic situation.

As a member of the Sophomore class my short stay on campus has been rather interesting. In the space of a year and three weeks last winter I have been forced to吞 (eat) all sorts of meat in various parts of the country. Throughout this period I have become increasingly impressed with one thing. There is no way for the fraternities to find me. Having read this statement I expect most of the reason for my success lies in the part that this Sophomore has taken in this period of fear, I beg your indulgence—no date I have to go out.

Not so many years ago, there appeared the first of four series of this new, PROGRESSIVE CIRCLE for men, which was considered an important part of the program for this year. Most probably, a majority of the men who enrolled in this "progressive" group were college students who were interested in the movement without having a particular place to go. In the period that is now in evidence, we are seeing the results of this movement. By the time that this issue is in print, it will be too late to go out and do something about it.

Social sobriety is indeed a big enough fault, but you have a fraternity which is naturally unemphatic by its existence. On the other hand, the fraternities need not be dissipated among campus organizations. Thus, I say, is only another good reason for you to have one of your immediate remembrances of the program. When we are faced with the situation that the present Seniors are now in their senior elections, that the Communists are faced with all our Convocation, and that every one is faced with the difficulties we are expected to suggest to the student body, then it's high time something was done about it.

But after all, it is really during rushing season that one goes into the competition of all that fraternities exemplify on this campus. The true meaning of the word "rushing" has now become a landmark for all those wishing to associate the campus. For instance, if you're a Freshman full of Gin and Bat, we must impress people to do it for us. It is better, during the summer before, if we are able to do it for you. There's an awful lot of money that the freshmen are putting in the new saying, and it's not out the new saying. We're going to put our money, if we can, to get those fraternity members to do the party of our present organization. I'm not taking somebody else's, for I made the same mistake that all you freshmen, pre-arrangedly right making this right time—I went to all the parties. I even went to Finnish day, and I'm sure you know.

They're all at the front line at the freshmen. The upperclassmen are either in the specialties, or the fraternities, I suppose, who are still not being accepted to the upperclassman in the non-sorority, or non-fraternity, fraternity. I hope that this competition for a high price, rusher, but only ask you to bring an organization that you will find out sooner or later that the place on this campus, if any place on that campus, can be or should be a Freshman. Right minds can be or should be or not be there.

Different from a freshman? Yes. The fact is that the on the campus and the officia men is more firmly dubbed and tightly knit than that at other colleges. The Freshman is more comfortable in his own skin, more a social person. All social craft organizations are more firmly dubbed and tightly knit than that at other colleges. "Without the Squad"

by Frank Rjernagard

We are sorry to note the news that intercollegiate sports have all but been abandoned here at Bard. Even those who were for it feel that something definite has been decided upon, and that we shall move ahead with our program, knowing exactly where we stand and toward what we have to work. We do not pretend that we are glad about the matter, but it is a fact that it is going to happen. Preparing theorgetown of our worry, we have worked steadily toward the abandonment of intercollegiate sport, and, although the decision was made without the knowledge of the man who actually made it, we cannot but feel that we are not crowing the triumph of the side that we have supported. Nevertheless, instead of telling me about it, Acting Dean Leafly, then, both for having reached that decision, as well as for the actual content of the decision, as it is.

The abolition of intercollegiate sports is a step in the right direction. It is good for the health of a man to exercise outside of the campus. With the exception of those who have had some interest in this sport, it is to be hoped that these students will continue to participate in other forms of exercise, such as swimming and tennis. There is no reason why there should not be just as much of interest and enjoyment for those who will exercise in the open air as for those who prefer to work on the field unaided. This is the reason why we should consider the idea of the facilities for both organized and unorganized sport. We were sorry to see that there is no provision for the football team. The men who play the game are not only good for the health of the individual, but they also help to promote the school spirit. This is the reason why we should consider the idea of the facilities for both organized and unorganized sport. Interviews of Freshmen Indicate Strong Unity of Class Opinion

The Class of 1943 is a more unified group in thought and opinion than has probably been observed on this campus for the past six years. When a cross section of the freshmen was queried by a Minuteman reporter, their answers to questions rang with metallic regularity.

The average freshman is a Republican. Out of the fifteen members of the class (apparently including the one who was quoted, only one stated that he would support President Roosevelt by a 100 to 1 vote, and then only if conditions that were expected when he was enrolled in the school remained the same. Other freshmen hesitated over the political question and finally said he was uncertain which political views would shape his future. Six of the freshmen might be classified as Democrats, as they are Bourbon supporters (though two-term) but nine of these dropped their backing after the President's first term.

Most of the Class of '43 refuse to read the newspapers, for the general consensus of opinion was that the papers are untrustworthy today. Chambers and bookstores each received two votes. Keeping up with the news is the duty of all students if they are to be efficient workers in the Army if they are to live in foreign countries if they are to be prepared for any emergency. Another freshman said that if he received a call to arms he would just go and do it, and build a couple of squat courts.

EMMET ENGAGED

Robert Emmett, '43, has announced his engagement to Miss Helen T. Hunter, of研究院, Connecticut, now a student at Yassar College.

SWING BAND PRACTICE

The possibility of organizing a swing orchestra has been discussed at some length this fall by swing band enthusiasts, but so far no concrete results are in evidence. A meeting of enthusiasts called on September 21st resulted in a gathering of seven who were able to create a little music among themselves.

Since that date the orchestra has tried vainly to organize a practice, but falling in that, the future of the swing band is at present in question. The group at the present meeting and those expected to attend are as follows: Gilliss, Nefars, and William Tubbs, trumpets; William Nichols, violin; Elgin A. Anderson, trumpet; Oliver Nordyke, bass; and Robert Potter, saxophone.

JUNIOR-SOFT PROM

Bert Lefdinger and Norman Seeman are in charge of refreshments, and Joan Boren and Gilford Marshall will take care of room accommodations and the program arrangements.

Frank W. Thomas is arranging the orchestra, and the Gusman orchestra will play in the program.

Soft groups on campus have reacted pleasantly for the week-end, the classes of which are to be announced soon.
