Club Budgets To Be Submitted To Council Tonight For Action

The Budget Committee will submit this term's budget to the Council tonight detailing the expenditure of $8748. The money is accumulated by assessing each student $25 in Constitution fees.

As in past terms, the Romanesque will be the largest budget. It was allocated $2195. Of this money, approximately $1500 will be spent on the Semi-Formal, $300 for the installation of new windows, $100 for the installation of new doors, and $100 for the purchase of new furniture.

The budget for the next term is still under discussion, but it is expected that the budget will be based on the same principles as the previous budget.

Parking Lot To Be Constructed

Dr. Kline revealed in a recent interview that the provisions for the construction of a parking lot near the fire house were accepted. In a joint statement, the Council and the Fire Department expressed their support for the project.

Pres. Kline Advocates Shorter Social Hours

A special meeting of the Social Regulations Committee was held Tuesday night at 8:30 to discuss the term's new social regulations. The new regulations were proposed by the President, and the committee supported them.

The committee recommended the following changes:

- Shorter social hours: 10:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m.
- No dancing allowed after 11:00 p.m.
- No drinking allowed after 10:00 p.m.

The committee also recommended that all students be required to attend a mandatory social meeting before the start of the term.

Bard To Have Delegation in Mock U. N. Assembly

On the weekend of March 24, Bard will send six delegates to the U. N. General Assembly's simulation, where they will represent the United States to the Assembly, the Security Council, and various specialized agencies.

Field Period Job Files Shown Out of Date

Recent "Field Period" reports indicated that many of the Placement cards in the Office of Field Period were out of date. (The file must be expanded to include job opportunities for Bard students who are interested in the Social Regulations Committee.

The committee has recommended the following changes:

- The file should be expanded to include job opportunities for Bard students who are interested in the Social Regulations Committee.
- The file should be updated regularly to ensure that it contains current information.

Employers Swamped

Some employers have been swamped with applications. Some employers have had to reduce their numbers of open positions. The Social Regulations Committee has recommended that employers be required to follow a standardized process to ensure that all students have an equal opportunity to apply.

The student body is once again faced with an apparent breach of faith by the administration. This breach is the actions of the President in presiding over the new social regulations before anyone has had a chance to challenge them. It is the very essence of this situation that the President, in attacking the committee which formulated the new regulations, is treating them on the grounds that it is unrepresentative and its members are merely procuring the views of the student body. He is assuming, as well as the good faith of the student body has been accepted unreservedly, that the members of the committee of evaluation committee and faculty are not clearly seen by the President's actions and, if it were not for the protection of the students' rights, the President's actions might be classified as an abuse of his power.

The President is in the face of this situation attempting to restrict the student body to the role of executor of the Social Regulations Committee. The student body now more than ever to keep their place in the college and the coming evaluation will reveal such strong evidence of the regulations as to make it evident that the President and the students will not be taken in by the sweeping action. The student body now more than ever to keep their place in the college and the coming evaluation will reveal such strong evidence of the regulations as to make it evident that the President and the students will not be taken in by the sweeping action.

One of the topics up for discussion is the question of the future of the college and the student's role in it. The question now is whether the President and the students are working together in the interest of the students or whether they are working against the students. The question is whether the President and the students are working together in the interest of the students or whether they are working against the students.

The period of adjustment and difficulties is over.

The period of adjustment and difficulties is over. The problems of the past few years have been resolved, and the college is now ready for a new phase. The administration and the student body are working together to ensure a smooth transition to the new phase. The period of adjustment and difficulties is over.

The New Dormitory

To Bard, the college and the community: It seems to me that the turning over of the New Dormitory to the incoming freshmen, girls will be disastrous, both for the girls who move in and for the college. I am realistic that the administration of the college have considered their move very carefully, I should like to note that the administration of the college have considered their move very carefully.

From The President...

It was suggested to me that I might write about some of the "problems" of Bard. I suppose such problems might include social regulations, size of classes, food, campus parking, finances, and the like.
But in a sense, all these are peripheral. Or put another way, if we face the main question and answer it soundly, these subordinate questions will tend to disappear or their answers will become evident.
What do I mean by "the main question"?
I think it is two-fold, and essentially this:
What kind of college one ought to seek to be?
What are the steps it should begin to take toward that goal?
I think a student might put the question in these terms:

Dr. Reiss To Take Position At Iowa U.

Dr. irl L. Reiss, Assistant Professor of Sociology and Anthropology at Bard, has accepted an appointment to the faculty of the University of Iowa, where part of his duties will be the development of a graduate program in the sociology of the family.

From the evidence gathered at these hearings, the committee will conduct its formal evaluation.

Student Support Needed

In a statement released to the Bardian, the committee strongly urges all students to especially respect the regulations and live up to their part in the agreement involved with the 30 days trial period. The opinion of the committee was that now more than ever before, a united and strong student body is necessary.
