Doctor Harry Reviews Play by Euripides
One of the most interesting and worth-while lectures of the year was given on Monday evening, May 7, when Dr. J. E. Harry presented to the student body the Hippolytus of Euripides. It was given in preparation for the production of the same play at the Bennett School in Millbrook, May 18, 19, and 20.
Euripides, 480-406 B. C., was perhaps the greatest of the three tragic poets, the other two being Sophocles and Aeschylus. He was a deep thinker, a brooding and gloomy philosopher, but he was also of the modern school of his time and succeeded in getting nearer to humanity than any of his contemporaries.
The Hippolytus, which receives its name from the hero, is the story of a woman who, through unrequited love, takes vengeance on the man, one of the most common themes in Greek legend. Hippolytus was imperious, unambitious, proud, and in- sensible to love, the latter characteristic being the greatest factor in causing his downfall at the hands of Aprodite, whom he refused to honor.
Dr. Harry gave a most inspiring and scholarly talk. His fine enthusiasm for Greek tragic poetry made his audience to a reaction which undoubtedly will be instrumental in helping the Greek theatre at Millbrook.

Columbia College Dean Talks to Undergraduates
Outlines the Scope of Ideal Education in Informal Lecture to Student Body
On Thursday evening, May 3, Dr. Herbert E. Hawkins, Dean of Columbia College, was introduced to the student body of St. Stephen's when he came here for a lecture. His remarks were well-spiced with humor, and the whole talk generally informal.

Lyre Tree Workers Given New Positions
In the May issue of "School Science and Mathematics," Dr. Harold T. Phelan, head of the Mathematics department, has an article entitled "Synthetic Projective Geometry." It deals with the history of the attempts in Europe and the United States to verify the classic presentation of Euclid, by the injection of the simpler and more spectacular theorems of the so-called modern geometry.

On Tuesday, May 3, at a meeting of the members of the Lyre Tree board, the following were elected to office, and will fill the offices stated before the individual names:

ST. STEPHEN'S CAPTURE LA CROSSE TILT FROM WILLIAMS
Scarlet Team Closes Season With Easy Victory 5-1—Kroll and Keen Star for St. Stephen's

On Saturday, May 12, the St. Stephen's College lacrosse team closed its season by defeating the Williams twelve, 5 to 1 in a hard-fought game at Annandale. The game was played as one of the features of the Senior Ball week, and was witnessed by a large crowd.
Opening the attack in the first few minutes of play, the Saints carried the ball down the field, and Quarter- man scored the first goal of the game. Kroll leading the home defense, and playing by far the best he has this year, easily repulsed Wil- liam's efforts to tally. Before the end of the first period, Keen, Mc- Keen, and Heuss each added a goal to the home score.
In the second period the play was much closer, and better stickwork was exhibited. Keen again scored for St. Stephen's after a short scrimmage, and Williams tallied her lone goal before the last minutes of play.

This game was the end of a not altogether successful season, for the team won but two out of the seven games played. They emerged victorious over Springfield and Williams, but lost to Yale, New York University, Swarthmore, Montclair Athletic Club, and Lafayette.
Time: Two thirty-minute periods. Referee: Wardell.
Goal Umpires: Snell, S. S. C.; Parker, Williams.
Timeskeeper: Vollmer.

COLLEGE CHORUS WILL MAKE ONE MORE TRIP
The next trip will be to St. John's Church, Kingston, on June 3. The proposed trip to Peekskill has had to be cancelled owing to the length of the trip over roads in the condition in which they are now.

"What is your vocation, my good man?"
"I'm a Baptist."
"That is your belief. I want to know your vocation. For instance, I am an actor."

THE LYRE TREE

SALVE!

A change has occurred in the administration of the paper. At such an event there is usually much talk concerning the paper’s “policy” and many promises are made. This time the “Lyre Tree” will dispense with that sort of thing. The new staff can do nothing better than to carry on with the job handed over by the old staff. This is a job of keeping the “Lyre Tree” from the state of apparent death in which it has sunk at times in the past, when discouraged editors have thrown up the sponge; furnishing a medium of connection between St. Stephen’s of today and those who have gone out from the campus in the yesterdays; of recording the things done and experienced in this ever-changing institution; of service to those of the undergraduates who have some ideas that should be expressed in print; of studying with loyalty and criticism the administration behind the administration.

It would be a difficult thing for an editor to surpass the performance of William T. Brunot, retiring Editor-in-Chief. There have been editors who have been practically thrown into office, without previous experience, but Mr. Brunot was one of those who had worked up from the bottom of the staff. He knew what he was taking up when he assumed control of the paper, and set about to make the successful volume that he has. And, to those other Senior members of the “Lyre Tree” board who are now settling affairs on campus in preparation for the bigger jobs to come, the new board presents its appreciation for their guidance in the past and its best wishes for their success in the future.

For some reason or other, work on the “Lyre Tree” has always been a rather thankless task. While it is true that in such a small community as we inhabit, the news value of the “Lyre Tree” is practically all, still, to the several hundred faithful readers on our mailing list the news in their college paper is “news.” It is for them, principally, that it is published. Still, the “Lyre Tree” tries to make itself as attractive as possible to the campus reader, with special features and occasional unique treatment of news. The recent “tree” number of the paper was very well received, but it is obvious that this type of issue could not be put out every time. If there were so many items published, there would be no appeal to anyone except the campus reader, and the link between college and the general reader would be broken.

In our opinion, the service of maintaining this link is the greatest that the “Lyre Tree” can perform for St. Stephen’s. We have an ideal. This is to make the work on the “Lyre Tree” something more than a mere “extra-curricular” activity. If the members of the staff and those who aspire to be its members can be made to realize that the paper is worthwhile, and that work on it is training and experience for journalistic work in future life, then a “Lyre Tree” worker will get something else out of the job besides a medal and a degree for his fraternity. The only way that staff members will come to this realization is when they find that someone else is after their job, and “Lyre Tree” work will then have just as much of the element of competition in it as athletics.—M. P. C.

In this issue of the “Lyre Tree” a new policy of “covering” the concerts at St. Stephen’s has been instituted. This is to present them not so much as news articles, but more in the nature of criticisms. This is rather as the case should be. A candid view of the programs has been presented, giving the impressions of the staff who have seen them. It is quite possible that the criticisms may not agree with those of “Lyre Tree” readers, but it is seldom that criticisms are unanimous. Should anyone disagree with the published impression of a program, the “Communications” column of the paper desires and welcomes the expression of such a disagreement. That is one of the many purposes of the column.

Monday evening, May 14, the student body had the enjoyment of a return recital by Pearl Sutherland Ideler, pianist. This time she was accompanied by Doris Humphrey. Denishawn dancer, whose performance occupied two-fifths of the entire program, entirely insufficient to meet the demands of her audience. The vigorous applause which greeted the efforts of the dainty little lady is enough on which to base the prophecy that she will be asked to return here. Miss Humphrey, as herself stated, does not adapt a dance to a selection of music, but rather selects really to interpret the composition into the expression of her art. At her St. Stephen’s performance the audience was completely filled.

That this college needs an auditorium suitable for such events was brought to the fore again last Saturday night. Under the direction of President Bell some attempt at lighting effects was done, is addition to a drop curtain at the end of the gymnasium and on which the lights were played. We feel that in a more suitable building Miss Humphrey’s work would have had even more appeal than what it did.

Mrs. Ideler sustained her popularity here by her performance. Even if her technique where not what it is, her personality alone would be sufficient to satisfy a St. Stephen’s audience. She has appeared here in the past principally as an accompanist and it is in this work that she excels, for a good accompanist is a treasure. However, in her solo work, lying in the field from Haydn to Debussy, Mrs. Ideler played with an exquisite feeling and appreciation of her dozen numbers. To the “Lyre Tree” critic her Chopin numbers appealed especially, but he has a weakness for them.

The piano recital of Frederick Tolton, on the evening of Monday, April 30, was particularly well appreciated. Following roughly the idea about which pianists are now building their recital programs for St. Stephen’s, Mr. Tolton indicated something of the evolution of modern music from the classic to the romantic. There was almost no truly modern music on the program.

Mr. Tolton played with vigor and some originality, and his jovial nature made him very well liked. However, even though comparisons are odious, we can’t help remarking that his technique was by no means as good as that of Mr. Bristol. Mr. Tolton pounded, and lacked the beautiful precision and delicacy of Mr. Bristol. This was particularly noticeable in the treble of the "Melodie" by Spematti, which was played to sound shrill and piercing when it should have been clear and melodiously penetrating.

On the other hand, Mr. Tolton caught very well the spirit in "Dr. Gradus ad Parnassum" and "Jambo's Lullaby" by Debussy, though he did (Continued on page 3) not get along so well with "The Goliwege's" Cakewalk." The "Etude in F Minor" by Liszt seemed to be the best performance of the evening from the point of view of technique.

After all, even though it didn't stand too much critical examination, Mr. Tillotson's vigorous playing was exhilarating.

HIS FIRST EPISTLE

Dear Laddie Boy:

I've arrived! Prexy invited me up to the house on the hill the other day. I don't suppose you can appreciate my spirit of elation since you are now the chosen pet of a professor and apparently not a common pretentious dog, first the protégé of a clerical English professor and now a waif of the campus, such an experience was overwhelming. But Prexy has a habit of cracking her knuckles and his searching stare, and allowed me to make myself comfortable on one of his nice thick rugs and fulfill my suspicions by popping a direct question on me.

"Jack," he asked, "What do you think is wrong with this college?"

Imagine asking me, the dog of the institution, what is wrong with the place? But my canine blood didn't fail me. I started up, braced myself as well as I could—for I'm aging fast—and barked away.

"Prexy," I began, "Do you mean to ask an heirless airdale to air his views on collegiate problems?"

"Yes," answered Prexy, "You have been here for four years now. You have had better opportunities to make observations in both the chapel and classroom. You must be well informed."

You know, Laddie Boy, when Prexy spoke of my four years stay here, many pictures passed before my mind's eye. The old football days when we all used to go to Poughkeepsie and stand along the gridiron, feeling the thrill of being college men. The glorious bonfires after a victory, when praise for St. Stephen's went to the heavens. Why I can hear Prexy now coming down the campus on a Saturday evening shouting "Score! Score!" anxious to tell us of another victory.

But, Laddie Boy, I've heard a lot of talk concerning the fact that St. Stephen's is no longer a name unto itself, but it has been added the name of Columbia University. You know how large that place is. Think how it will add to the number of the Alumni of St. Stephen's! As I recalled that fact, standing there before Prexy, another picture of a future St. Stephen's formed itself in my mind. I saw our Alma Mater loosed from the limitations of a small college. She had football, bowling, national fraternities, more students—everything that makes a fellow glad that he's a college man. I realize, Laddie Boy, since I am graduating this year I won't be privileged to enjoy the New St. Stephen's; but that didn't affect my optimism as I said to the President:

"Prexy, there is nothing wrong with this college!"

Dagmatically yours,

JACK
