Boar’s Head Dinner
And Service Preceded Christmas Vacation
College Observes Annual English Tradition.

Once again does St. Stephen’s College—members of the Student Council—mount at the merriest Yuletide with its traditional Boar’s Head Dinner. Thursday evening, December 10th, the old dining room will ring with the laughter and merriment of “Good Olde Christmas” carols, while the steward, Mr. H. A. Adams, playing the cornet, will be Dr. Bell. Speeches will be given by the customary person: Dr. Davidson, Dr. Derwent, Curator of the Library, and the President of the University to the student body. Pesciers Croft will be all his usual boar and head dinner, and Edgar Woods will be the part of the boar also. The Boar’s Head Dinner is a custom which is among the oldest in the world.

EDITORIAL

Hitch Your Wagon to a Star

In a recent reading of “The Signs of These Times,” Dean Sperry of Harvard makes use of a striking and meaningful phrase, when he exhorts us to take “long views” of life, and its manifestaations about us. Four years of experience have shown us the inevitable consequences of short views of life, to which, under the circumstances of a small community life we are inclined, almost in spite of ourselves.

As the months drift away from September, Decemberwheras, we see less and less, our horizons becomes smaller and smaller, and our sense of proportion sadly limited. In fact, by the time October has rounded out its length of days, even the biggest and best of us find it unusual to allow our minds to range beyond the confines of the stone posts which mark the campus bounds. In a world where men in every department and walk of life are beginning to take “long views” where they are literally bringing all infinity within the realm of an orange where they may peer at it fearlessly, we become more and more concerned with the petty irrelevant, humdrum thoughts, words, and deeds, of those round about us—their clothes, wives, husbands, dogs, fiddles, and cabbages—everything and all things except what matters even a little. It is worth one’s life and reputation to mention anything of world-importance at dinner. One might think we are living under the dictatorical censorship of a Mussolini, for all we talk of politics. If one grows tired of talking about the food at meals, one is obliged to withdraw into a stupid silence of obscurity. If we cannot hitch our wagon to a star, let us at least take an intelligent glimpse at the heavenly bodies once in a while.

And now, having written this didactic editorial, we turn our ears to a conversation concerning clothes, wives, husbands, dogs.

Communication

Dear Editor:

In a communication in the Lyre Tree for December 23, Mr. W. E. W., who works for the Harvard University Recital Department, wrote a letter which he called “patriot,” I would like to know about Mr. W. W. We should be aware of the student body. We are all students, and Mr. W. W. is working in the Department of Philosophy. Many of the students who were on campus over the weekend made the event especially enjoyable and were able to have a good time. The weather was quite pleasant, and there was a light breeze which made it comfortable.

The text for the address was written by the Address Committee, who carefully reviewed it. Any events that may result in such a gathering will be considered to ensure that all members of the student body are aware of the event and that it is well advertised.

Sincerely,
David Sibbett

St. Stephen’s Tie

With Harvard in Lacrosse Ranking

May and June were bracketed at the top as the leading lacrosse teams in the annual ranking of the United States, but the ranking was not announced immediately. The reasons for this were the number of officials who were considered, determining a team for every college or in the association figurates, as it were, in the realm of strategy. The first ten places were as follows:

1. Harvard
2. Yale
3. Johns Hopkins
4. Princeton
5. Pennsylvania
6. Dartmouth
7. Brown
8. Cornell
9. Middlebury
10. St. Stephen’s and Harvard

The loss of the capacity for wonder, is an indication of spiritual senescence. If you would know religious faith, it is the first vision of religious insight. If you would know God, read books about him after you have quieted your mind. If you would understand beauty, read books about it. If you would understand your emotions, read books about them. If you would analyze your perceptions too, read books about them. Viewed from this end, the concept of the Colorado is the most sublime spectacle of the world. Peer at it from within and it is a merely color.

Greeks Pledge 24 New Men

Ten weeks of active rushing by the three fraternities were climax- ed at 7:30 P. M., Monday, December 2, by a pledgeing of twenty-four new men. Of these men, the Eulexian fraternity pledged 12, Kappa Gamma Chi, 9, and Sigma Alpha Rho- likh, 3. Following the announcement, by those bid, last of their deci- sions, was the first to the Pan- helenian Council in Albany. The ceremony was conducted separately by the various men.

The frazzled rush has been in progress since the opening of classes in September. It has taken the form of tea dances, "busts" dinners, informal cocktails, as well as much effective individual work and recruiting by the private parties. Daily at midnight, December 1, the long awaited fraternity bids an appeared in the lists of various men. Then followed a day of silence, deep deliberation and mutual excitement among those re- ceiving bids, and many con- siderations and not a little trepidation among the fraternity men until the official toasts were broken and the results known Monday evening, December 2.

The Eulexian fraternity, formed in 1868, originally as a literary soci- ety and later instituted as a se- cret organization has a present active membership of 21. During the past year it erected a new stone fraternity house in the English Tudor style.

Kappa Gamma Chi, founded in 1881 by a group of students includ- ing the late Alperon Creaghlay, au- thor of "The Last of the Heretics," numbers 33 active members. Sigma Alpha Rho-lkh, founded in 1885 and initiated in 1886, has 11 active members.

The following men were pledged by the three fraternities:

1. Arthur P. Adamson, 33, Phishing L. I.

3. John C. Parker, 33, New York, N. Y.
