Ralph Adams Cram Speaks On Architecture

Lectures Before Religion Class—Point Out Spiritual Nature of Art.

Probably the most distinguished visitor who has yet come to St. Stephen's, Dr. Ralph Adams Cram, the leading of the neo-Gothic movement in American architecture, lectured on the evening of February 9th before Mr. Ashley, Dean of the Junior Class. Twelve members of the Junior Class, 30 of the Sophomore Class, and 110 of the Senior Class attended the lecture. Dr. Cram is well known as the architect of the Church of the Intercession in New York, the new buildings at Williams and Amherst, and many other permanent contributions to the architecture of America. The changed design for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York, the third largest in the nation, is in the hands of Mr. Cram, and the completed structure will be an everlasting testimonial to his genius. His position in the field of aesthetic design is so eminent that it is no overstatement to say that no one has contributed more to the advancement of modern art than Dr. Cram.

The lecture consisted of an address by Dr. Cram on the role of architecture in life, and a showing of slides of his own work. His words were full of wisdom and inspiration, and his slides were a visual feast. The audience was captivated by his eloquent delivery and the beauty of his work. It was a privilege to have had the opportunity to hear Dr. Cram speak. The evening was a resounding success.

PUBLIC OPINION

A movement has been started in the eastern colleges to allow the students to vote on the student associations. St. Vincent was a leader in this movement for several years.

Mr. Debell, speaking of the student activities of S. C. O. hopes to produce, predicted his, in his usual difficulties in the student body, to carve his mark with spirit.

The history students are studying Dr. Murray's thesis majorly with the book of so much beautified work. (From Hone, "The Sun Rises in the East"

The sun rises in the east—and sets in the west. This occurrence is so common and so regular that we seldom notice it except for its unusual signification. We seldom see in this phenomenon of nature the beginning and the end of everything—the Alpha and Omega of life itself.

The sun of the college world also rises—yet it never sets. When a man starts his college career, we see the first rays on the horizon. We see the shadows of the night disappear, and a new world is disclosed, bathed in light. The promise of the day, of the future, is bourn in the morning of the student's life.

Holidays and vacations do not mar the steady glow of the college sun. A summer comes and passes—but the light is still there. Every phase of life in our little world either causes the sun to be clouded or to shine with greater brilliance. We see from the faint light of our early Freshman days to the high noon of our Senior experience. Each new year represents a new morning—every entering man is like a flower which the morning rays have just opened up.

Graduation comes; the annual exodus occurs—but the sun never sets. Instead, a new sunrise is apparent. A new untouched field is ours to do with as we will. We find ourselves in the afternoon of our career, enriched by the lessons of the morning, starting to feel our way unassisted—as the sun continues to shine.

Every man here at St. Stephen's realizes he lives and learns today to accomplish and construct tomorrow. For us there is no stopping, no resting, until we find our task. We sow now to reap later. At the present time in the beginning of this new semester we see a fresh period to be done with as we will. We can make ourselves better men; we can correct the errors of former days; we can expand to an unlimited growth. Each new year and each new day brings a new opportunity to make or break.

"Every day is a fresh beginning.""

Dr. Gardner Delivers Dynamic Sermon

Speaks At First Sunday Service of New Wrestor.

On Sunday, February 9th, the first Sunday service in the spring semester, at which all the members of the college were required to be present, was held in the Chapel at 10:30 A.M. The preacher was the Rev. Dr. Wallace J. Gardner of the class of 1936, Rehben of St. Paul's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and a Trustee of the college. Dr. Gardner used for a text the end of St. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians. Finally, brethren, whatever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praiseworthy thing, think on these things. A man's relation to the things of life is colored al- together by what he thinks. What you think determines what you are and what you will be. It is the intention of Paul to change the content of the thoughts of people, to get them to think of things that were deeper and nearer. If you can persuade people to do this in modern times, you will be molding public opinion, which is the recognized greatest force in the world.

THE LYRE TREE

"The Kingdom of Heaven" was the catch-phrase adopted by Christ to express His purpose in life's struggle, searching and seeking. It is a state to be accomplished here on earth. It is to be achieved by no. Everyone plays a part, positively or negatively. Everything, even the things of science, contribute to that end. You, as individuals, are privileged in being here; thinking men, who will carry to a logical conclusion what is good and beautiful and true. The benefits of the past are not given to us for anything which exists in our sphere, but for this greater purpose beyond it. Everything acquired in these halls of learning are not for your own immediate ends, but for that deeper and more far-reaching purpose of God's. Gilbert Chesterman was asked, after a short stay in New York, what he thought of Broadway. He said, "What a magnificent place it would be if men could not read." His point, of course, was, that all that marvellous power being exercised for such petty ends. The man who has no deeper and greater purpose than the end he is striving for just for himself, can only reach an ultimate emptiness about everything. "Whatever things are beautiful and true and lovely in your own life, if you will think on these things, your ultimate reward will not be that, but you will have contributed to the progress of civilization an immediate reward, you will have the joy of knowing that God's peace will dwell with you."
