What Makes the Firefly Glow?

YOU can hold a firefly in your hand; you can boil water with an electric lamp. Nature long ago evolved the "cold light." The firefly, according to Ives and Coble, radiates ninety-six percent light and only four percent heat. Man's best lamp radiates more than ninety percent heat.

An English physicist once said that if we knew the firefly's secret, a boy turning a crank could light up a whole street. Great is the advance in lighting that has been made through research within the last twenty years, man wastes far too much energy in obtaining light.

This problem of the "cold light" cannot be solved merely by trying to improve existing power-generating machinery and existing lamps. We should still be burning candles if chemists and physicists had confined their researches to the improvement of materials and methods for making candles.

For these reasons, the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company are not limited in the scope of their investigations. Research consists in framing questions of the right kind and in finding the answers, no matter where they may lead.

What makes the firefly glow? How does a firefly's light differ in color from that of an electric arc, and why? The answers to such questions may or may not be of practical value, but of this we may be sure—it is by dovetailing the results of "theoretical" investigations along many widely separated lines that we arrive at most of our modern "practical" discoveries.

What will be the light of the future? Will it be like that of the firefly or like that of the dial on a luminous watch? Will it be produced in a lamp at present undreamed of, or will it come from something resembling our present incandescent lamp? The answers to these questions will depend much more upon the results of research in pure science than upon strictly commercial research.

Convocation Backs Athletic Association

A special meeting of the Convocation of Undergraduates of St. Stephen's College on the evening of May 9th, President Colwell brought to the attention of the meeting the depleted condition of the finances of the A. A. It has been on this account that our scope of activity in athletics has been greatly limited, not only in basket-ball, but also in foot-ball and baseball. The action taken at this meeting is quite exemplary of the spirit and enthusiasm that all our men hold for this, very naturally, popular department of the college. After the Convocation Treasurer had reported a balance of nearly sixty-nine dollars in the treasury, without a dissenting voice, it was immediately moved to transfer sixty dollars of this amount toward the Athletic Association fund. After disposing of some other minor business, a number of the base-ball squad were called upon and amid hurrahs and salutations, each man was brought to his feet. It was all a splendid manifestation of loyalty and spirit and of the high place that our Alma Mater holds in the hearts of those concerned.

At the annual meeting of Convocation, May 16, the following officers were elected to serve for the next academic year:

President of the Convocation—Mr. Harry Turney High, '22.
Vice-President—Mr. Howard E. Koch, '22.
Secretary—Mr. Robert T. Dickerson, '22.
Treasurer—Mr. Herbert Donovan, '22.
Student Council—Mr. John B. Lyte, '23; Mr. Herbert Donovan, '22; Mr. E. E. Koch, '22; Mr. Donald M. Kastler, Sp. Marshal—Mr. Herbert A. Donovan, '22.
Member-at-Large, Finance Committee—Mr. Norman Howell.
Undergraduate Member, Gymnasium Committee—Mr. John S. Welford, '25.

Annandale Spring

Come up, come up to Annandale
For Spring-time is at hand;
In forest nook and wooded vale,
A perfect wonderland.

Come up, come up to Annandale
Where everything is gay
Bright violets and lilies pale
Bloom along the way.

Come up, come up to Annandale,
The grass and leaves are green,
And every streamlet tells a tale
Of life, calm and serene.

Come up, come up to Annandale,
See apple blossoms fair,
Their soft, smooth, silken petals frail,
With perfume scent the air.

Come up, come up to Annandale,
The twilight hours are long,
The beautiful sunsets cannot fail
To route your soul in song.

Dr. Whiting to Leave

The Messenger wishes to announce that Professor Whiting has finally accepted the offer of the University of Iowa which was mentioned in our last issue. The college is very sorry to hear of Dr. Whiting's final decision, feeling that we are losing a very valuable member of our teaching staff. His successor has not yet been appointed.

We are also able to announce that Professor Prince has decided to stay at St. Stephen's. This has caused a great deal of satisfaction among the undergraduate body, especially with his disciples on the athletic field.

Check!

With what gusto does this mystic word sound of late through the stately halls of St. Stephen's! A casual visitor on the campus with some of the students have gone into the hat and coat stand business, or are taking Upton Sinclair more seriously than usual. But no, the chess epidemic has hit the campus, and hit it hard. Until these last few weeks, there has never been, so far as we know, any interest in this indoor sport. But now one can find a chess game going on at any time of day or night. When the craze first started, cries of "old fogies," "time-wasters' union," and similar impertinent remarks were hurled at the select few, but those who came to scoff remained to pray, and almost every day the experts are asked to teach their art to anxious nephews. The plague has become so malignant that some of the enthusiasts have come to the conclusion that they must either give up studies or chess.

The favorite form of the sport seems to be "dumb-bell chess," in which the contestants strive to see who can lose his queen first. To date the representative from Flatbush bears the palm alone. It is understood that a team will soon be formed, and a petition presented to the A.A. for recognition as an official form of athletics. We understand that Major Prince is reading up on the latest rules, and is anxious to put out a competing team that can compete with any Eastern university. He is contemplating stringent training rules. The most promising material to date seems to be Herbert Craig, who has issued a challenge to meet any other infant chess prodigy in an open field. Also Mr. Moore, one of the newest of the nephews, wishes to support encouraging progress in the arduous research he is conducting at present on the differentiation of the squares.

Dramatics

DRAMATIC activity at St. Stephen's has at last made a definite start. After much trial and tribulation, a comparatively small group of men (the same few who are on hand always to take part in outside activities) has succeeded in preparing "The Man Who Married A Dumb Wife" for presentation, with the aid of Mrs. Kaltenbach, Mrs. MacDonald and Mrs. Whiting, and under the direction of the President.

Equipment for the stage has arrived from the Lee Lash Studios, and installed by Mr. Robert Dickie, who decorated the Ambassador and the Ritz, in New York. Our facilities now on hand for putting on a production are of the first order. The carpenters are putting the finishing touches on our knock-down stage; complete lighting equipment will arrive from New York in time for the dress rehearsals beginning May 23rd.

A performance will be given in the gymnasium for the faculty, students, and neighbors on Wednesday, May 25th. The next evening the play will be staged in the Town Hall at Hyde Park, under the auspices of the Episcopalian.

The play will be preceded by a short preliminary program. Fr. Fowler will play, Fred Barry will sing, and Herbert Craig has prepared one of his readings. No printed programs will be used, but a prologue will be read describing the play and characters.

Consecration of Bishop Manning

On Wednesday, May 11th, in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City, the Rev. William T. Manning, S. T. D., D. C. L., sometime rector of Trinity Parish, New York, was consecrated Bishop of New York. Since the Bishop of New York is ex-officio President of our Board of Trustees, it was quite fitting that our President and Faculty should be present and form a part of the very impressive procession.

The procession marched from the old Synod Hall to Amsterdam Avenue, and then across the naive foundation to the present entrance of the crossing. The cathedral close and the nave foundation were filled with hundreds of people anxious to see the vast throng of priests and bishops. The severe black and white of the clergy was relieved by the flaming colors of clubs and doctoral gowns. The Eastern Orthodox bishops added a touch of splendor and were in sharp contrast with their brother bishops of the American Church.

And the beloved and venerable Presiding Bishop, the Right Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, D.D., Bishop of Missouri, was the consecrator, assisted by the Bishop of Southern Ohio, Dr. Vincent, and the Bishop of Massachusetts, Dr. Lawrence. The attending priests were the Rev. William W. Sellenger, D.D., Vicar of St. Agnes' Chapel, and the Rev. Milo H. Gates, D. D., Vicar of the Chapel of the Intercession. The Presenting Bishops were the Bishop of Vermont, Dr. Hall, and the Bishop of Pennsylvania, Dr. Rhinelander. The Right Rev. Thomas F. Gaiker, D. D., Bishop of Tennessee, and President of the Council, preached the sermon and Bishop Lloyd read the Litany.

Dr. Houghton Celebrates Anniversary

The Rev. George Clarke Houghton, D.D., celebrated the fifth anniversary of his ordination to the Priesthood on Thursday, May 19. The Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Gaiker, D.D., S. T. D., President of the Presiding Bishop and Council, was the celebrant at a Solemn Celebration of the Holy Eucharist in the Church of the Transfiguration, New York, of which Dr. Houghton has long been rector. The sermon was preached by the Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, S. T. D. C. L., Bishop of New York.

Dr. Houghton is the second oldest alumnus of St. Stephen's College, and is of the class of 1867. The Church of the Transfiguration is one of the best known parishes in the United States, and Dr. Houghton is one of the prominent figures in the American Church. His long years of excellent service are known to everyone, and the Messenger is glad to present him the felicitations of the undergraduate body.

Enlarged Student Body

Owing to the greatly increased student body next year, the president has found it necessary to lodge three students to a suite in the stone buildings. We had hoped to have some new dormitories by the opening of the next academic year, but owing to the financial stringency which St. Stephen's is suffering along with the whole country, we will be able to build this summer. It is hoped that this inconvenience will not last longer than the coming year.

While this is nothing like as pleasant as our old arrangement, there are some advantages. First of all, St. Stephen's needs more men. For years we have realized that we are just a bit too small for our own good. We can't wait until we are able to furnish such comfortable quarters as we have hitherto enjoyed. We believe this arrangement will be of great advantage to the incoming freshmen. Every sophomore and upperman should play an up-right game of himself to see that the flesh billeted in with him is warped into a real St. Stephen's man in short order. This is an opportunity to instil the ideals of the college into him at close range. Keep him at his studies. In this way the mid-year tragedy of this year may be averted.
Sig-Alph Dance a Success

With the advent of the full moon, and the full flowering of the springtime evening, the doors of the gymnasium were thrown open to an eager throng of students and their partners. As they entered into the bright light of the outer hall they could see through the wide door leading into what was once the main part of the gymnasium—a scene that was entirely foreign to the ordinary business-like aspect of the workday "gym." The picture presented to them was one of wooded scene with Oriental lanterns hanging from the foliage. Dim light pervaded throughout. As the dancers entered from the bright light of the hall, they were immersed in the soft light of the Oriental lanterns. Looking up one could see a canopy of green like the natural arched roof of the forest. Hanging on the back wall of the room with a background of massed laurel leaves was the badge of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, a border studded with jeweled lights of purple and gold. The lower walls were banked with large branches with thick foliage. Under the balcony were arranged seats for the patronesses and their friends.

The dance began with a burst of rhythm on Zita's orchestra. The couples swayed into motion across the floor and soon the floor was filled with swirling figures, colorful in the subdued light of the lanterns. Zita lived up to his reputation; everyone was filled with the dancing urge, and kept on tripping the light fantastic until the end. The music and the poetry of the evening, combined with the compelling nature of the scene, kept the dancers on their feet until the last strains of the closing waltz ceased and the Sig-Alphs closed the evening with their cheer.

The moonlight waltz was especially beautiful. All lights were turned off except the jewels of the Sig-Alph badge. The moonlight streaming through the foliage above, bathed the dancers in a silvery mist—it was enchanting.

The patronesses attending were Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Kelchenbach, Mrs. MacDonald, Mrs. Upton, Mrs. Sher, Mrs. Whiting, Mrs. Prince. The dancers were as follows: President and Mrs. Bell; Prof. and Mrs. MacDonald, Dr. and Mrs. Whiting, Mrs. Prince, Dr. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin, Mr. and Mrs. de Potter, Miss Adams, of Red Hook, with Keevel; Mrs. Smillie of Rhode Island, with Stretch; Miss Rowe, of Rhodebeek, with Hoffman; Miss Scott with Strong; Miss Curtis, of Red Hook, with Moore; Miss Savage, of Hampstead, with Simms; Miss Richard, of Williamsburg, Pa., with Colwell; Miss Van Tuyl, of Kirkwood, Ill., with Koch; Miss Yorkman, of Chicago, with Clark, of Wilkes College, with Welford; Miss Persons, of Brooklyn, with Rolf; Miss Van Waggenen, of Kingston, with Dickerson; Miss O'Connell, of Barrytown, with Vassar; Miss Hayes, of Vassar, with Kastler, Miss de Lorne, of Brooklyn, with F. White; Miss Locke, of Barrytown, with T. Richay; Miss Moody, of New Haven, with Sayre; Miss Cribbon, of Poughkeepsie, with Lyre; Miss Plass, of Barrytown, with Vannix; Miss Rollins, of Barrytown, with Mr. Fowler; Miss Reinert, of Trenton, with Fitz-Randolph; Miss Meikam, of Irvington-on-Hudson, with Kidd; of Poughkeepsie, with Coffin; Miss MacPadd, of Red Hook, with Edwards; Miss Jones, of Schenectady, with Jones; Miss Henderson, of Troy, with Craig; Miss Hall, of Balston Spa, with Howell; Miss Betts, of Troy, with Simmonds; Miss Narpe, of Vassar, with Cowling; Miss Thompson, of Cornwall, with Barker; Miss Dean, of New York, with Donovan; Mr. Anderson, of White Plains; Miss Roberts, with Mr. Webb; Brinley.

The students expected to entertain their guests with a baseball game with Albany State the Saturday following the dance. The college with their guests and friends, journeyed to Red Hook, but had to be content with watching the St. Stephen's team warm up. The Albany team had trouble all the way down, and did not arrive on the campus until after dinner.

EDITORIAL

This issue marks the maiden effort of the new board. We presume that we are expected to state our policy for the coming year in this issue, and thus keep up the tradition of incoming editorial boards. This is no easy thing to state in a few words. So much of the Messenger needs changing that we are still a little dazed as to where to begin. When we say that we have inherited a paper with about as much wrong with it as possible, we do not mean to cast aspersions on any former editorial board. They have shed bitter tears over the Messenger and deserve nothing but praise. We know that at present the Messenger is not popular. For this we have no apology to make to undergraduates, since the condition is largely their own making. That the alumni are not enthusiastic over us is evident by the small percentage of them on the subscription list. And we can hardly blame them in this. But in the future we want to have such a paper that they will be deserving of both blame and pity if they are not regular subscribers to their college publication.

The very physical appearance of the Messenger is against it in the beginning. Its present paper, form, and arrangement resemble the annual report of some ambitious parish, or the literature of the National Student Council. Such literature is all right for organizations of this kind, but it is a dreary excuse for a college paper. The new board is ambitious to give it some personality, an attractive appearance, something that will speak to you at first sight. To do this we need pages, cartoons, and illustrations of various kinds. We want to give it a distinctive paper and shape, so that one can tell what a man is reading when he crosses the campus with the latest issue. This is going to cost some money, which must come in some way.

As for the material in the columns, dear fellow-students, a very large part of it is coming from you. Conditions described in the following editorial are going to cease. We have the raw material in abundance, and henceforth contributions must be more remarkable for both quality and quantity. Get to work. We are willing to lead you, but not to shoulder your end of the pole. We are tired of continual appeals for copy and money, and we are going to quit being editorial mendicants. You are certainly right that a student paper must be the natural, spontaneous product of campus feeling. An objective datum from without is artificial and forced. We know you are busy— but that excuse is worn thin. Utilize the time you spend in criticizing the Messenger by putting something positive to work. The very fact that we have to combine the functions of more than one paper, gives every man a field to exercise his particular talents. Let us make the thing worth reading.

This, in short, is the policy of the new board: To have a real, live paper, or tear a bone loose in the attempt. If the Messenger is worth it, the alumni will subscribe and business men will be glad to have us show their advertising, which will benefit all concerned. We want to be a credit to St. Stephen’s. We are going to do our part, and we will not let you shirk yours.

Are you coming June 12-14?

THE MESSENER

The sixth, seventh, and eighth of May we found ourselves in an interesting group of college guests from Columbia, Princeton, Cornell and Colgate Universities, and Hamilton, Hobart, Adelphi, Hunter, Elmira, Rutgers, Vassar, and New York State Colleges. The guests arrived in time for a late dinner on Friday. After which part of the evening was spent in dancing to music furnished by "Fred" Lewis' Jazz Band, Benson's Orchestra, and others.

Saturday we were able to entertain our visitors by taking them to Red Hook, where they witnessed our gleeful and decisive victory over Manhattan College's baseball team. Saturday evening was a quiet one, although there were rumors that our guest incurred the slight displeasure of their classmates by staying out on the campus till a rather late hour.

Sunday was spent chiefly in the strolling arangers about the vicinity of the college. Sawkill Falls and the Italian garden came in for their rightly deserved share of applause and appreciation, and proved to be the most popular destinations of our perambulations. One of us calculated that no less than twenty couples visited the falls Sunday morning.

Some of us feared that St. Stephen’s was going to fail in upholding the hospitable traditions of a publication, but our fears proved groundless: the ice cream appeared at dinner Sunday noon.

Sunday afternoon we saw many cameras in action, and a few more expeditions to the falls were made by enthusiasts who were still undaunted by the explorations of the forenoon. And then came the dismal end of a perfect three days: our guests were forced to depart for their respective colleges shortly after vespers.

We are told by somebody or other that a conference of the National Student Council was held at St. Stephen’s on the sixth, seventh, and eighth of May. It is true that the visitors amused themselves off and on by holding committee meetings and various conferences in the gym, but we are rather doubtful that they accomplished much. Apparently a sermon-minded minority spent its time being increased at the majority of care-free delegates, which in turn spent its time sniffling at the little group of serious thinkers and picking wild flowers; between them things did not progress with exactly startling rapidity.

We are not sure if it was all about, but everybody did seem to have a pleasant time.

At the present time it is far from being a college to be a member of the Messenger Board. Namely it is one of the honors of the college, but there are two things—a lack of funds and a lack of contributors—which make the position one more of a trial and an anxiety than anything else.

It would probably do no good to talk of the shortage of funds at this time, but there is no reason why the Messenger should be short of material. In spite of the fact that there are no men in the college who can write, each month the unfortunate ones who make up the Board of Editors are compelled to scribble wildly to fill the issue, while the rest of the college sits back and waits to grab the new number as soon as it appears.

Either this state of affairs or the Messenger must stop. The present board feels under no obligation to turn out a paper every month by itself. The Messenger should represent St. Stephen’s, and not an unlucky half dozen men who for some reason feel compelled by sentiment to continue the farce of getting out a college paper.

The present board has been considering whether it would not be a good policy to discontinue the Messenger altogether. St. Stephen’s would then be without even an excuse for a publication, but it is feared that within a few years the student body would realize the need for some sort of publication, and there would be a spontaneous movement to start one. And that publication would succeed, for the reason that everyone would be interested in it.

The function of a Board of Editors is to select material for publication from the mass of student output at large. They should not be compelled to invent material of their own to fill the pages of the publication.

Do you want your Messenger or not? It is your paper, not the editors’. If you do not want it, make your desire known by continuing to refuse to send contributions. The board will not disappoint you.

In Other Colleges

This Spring the University of California is sending two teams across the continent. Its crew will meet the strong Princeton crew early in June, while its track team will participate in the meet at Cambridge in May.

Waseda University, of Japan, is planning to send a baseball team this Summer to compete with many of the larger colleges and universities of this country. Prof. Isao Abe, who is called "father of baseball in Japan," will accompany the team on the tour. Prof. Abe hopes to form a strong athletic friendship between the two countries.

BASEBALL SEASON OPENS

The baseball team opened its season with Albany State College, at Albany, on April 23. The game was played in a drizzling rain, play being suspended several times on account of the severity of the downpour, and the wet ball made luck a predominant factor. Albany State managed to get eight runs across the plate, while the best we could do was seven scores. There were no outstanding features of the game, as conditions made good playing impossible.

BEDTIME STORY

Heza was a bashful lad and he loved Minnie Thanks of the Iota Go Kappa house. Unfortunately his tongue wouldn’t function at the proper interval, however, and he never told her of his love. Then Heza hit upon a great scheme. He decided to take a few nips of Pernod before calling upon his love, thus to oil his backward tongue at the right time. But unfortunately our hero took a nip too much, so that instead of oiling his tongue he oiled his entire body so that he became a venerable “oil can.” Then he was sore in trouble for he could not distinguish a back door from a front door with the result that, chatting at will, he entered the back, proposed to the cook, and they lived “chattily” ever after.

Fr. Mac said, “Well, hoary, I guess I’ll go out and play.” So he trivocled with Hegel And spored with Schlegel, And had such a wonderful day.

PAGE MR. SIMMONS

By Horace A. Woodmansee, Colgate, ’22

What den is this where wild wast glasses?—
Scarred furnature and broken chairs—
Some ash-trays filled with butts a-glowing—
Waste-baskets filled to overflowing—
A wall that shrieks with pictures crude—
A gallery that would shock a prude—
Where every inch is plastered thick
With glaring penants hick-dicks—
A lonesome desk with studious look
Where no one ever cracks a book;—
A few near-music instruments—
Here everything is full of dents;
Here rough-house rules and heads are broken
And many a red-hot jest is spoken—
What is this den, this foe to gnom? You guessed! A college “STUDY” room!

Lament

By Lawrence S. Kane, Yale, ’23

You refresh me when I’m weary, and you make me bright and cheery, and
I’d like to know you better, you know you better very soon.
But when a fellow’s time is taken up that way
That mine is, say.
He’s dated from September, from September until June.
Though your comfort is attainable, and lost, and still regattellable,
It’s harder fast to do. So far to do it than is said.
For I’ve a reputation to sustain, and in my station you
Can see I have no time for you, my dear old college bed!

THE PRACTICAL PRUNE

Alexander C. Gwyn, Pennsylvania, ’21

They had not been sitting in the movies
For two long hours,
And it was nearly time for
The final clitch,
And yet he had not once
Tried to
Hold her hand.
And so it was she who had to
Let her hand slip over
To where it belonged;
Which puzzled him
Perplexedly
For quite a while.
But at last he saw it all
And then he took her hand in his
And deftly
Wound her wrist-watch!

JAZZ AND JACK

It was the night of the formal
And the boys all had "folks".
It was Jack’s first time in papa’s
And he was pulling some bulls.

Twined,
He kept his hands in his pockets
And he’d put cuffs on his pants.
Once he kept on Evie’s corns
And sat out the next dance.

Thiad,
The girls thought him a doodoo
When he poured tea down his neck.
And they all heartily admitted,
Their sin was dragged in a wreck.

Last down,
Later he went out into business
And separated money from owners.
Now they all ask him to dances.
They must have forgotten his boners.—Ezek.

Song of a Chemist

By Sylvester Bowen, Yale, ’23

I love to muse at evenfall
On the ways of my dear sitsites—
The acids, salts, I love them all,
And fats and carbohydrates.
Complex solutions saturated
I love to pour in glasses—
So you perhaps are not surprised
I think all weckers asses.

Our men are fools who love the kiss;
Swelter is 0(1)206
Swelter are thoughts of synthesis:
The loving chap know nix.
Not mine to sing of eyes and hair
Which are only Folly’s tools;
My joy is watching atoms pair,
And combining molecules.
Let others sing their silly lays
Of maid who are divinities—
I know that I will spend my days
With chemical affinities.

The other day I was thinking
In a day-coach.
The car was crowded
And the conductor said
Came in and said
To me: "Will you please
Remove your hat
From the seat
Next to you?"
I didn’t answer, and
He went away.
Later he came back
And asked me again.
Again
I didn’t answer
And he got mad
And picked up the hat
And threw it out.
The window... Ha! Ha! He got it when
The man
Who owned the hat
Came back from
The wood.

Dear Friends:

This month there are three things about which I wish to speak briefly:

1. COMMENCEMENT. The College wishes all of its old boys back. The graduating class are all men, of course, but you fellows are all boys, especially when you drive up the road once more and catch a glimpse of the June-time campus beneath the old trees. There were a good many of you who renewed your youth last June. Most of those men will be back for another rejuvenation this year. Are you going to join them? June 12-14 are the dates—and June 14 is the especial date—this year. The nurturing mother wishes to see her lads again.

2. NEXT YEAR'S ENTERING CLASS will be, as things look now, by far the largest in our history, and also of extraordinary quality. I am frequently asked if we can take any more. Send them along, if they are worth while.—real men, decently prepared, and with some small degree, at least, of affection for learning. We'll pack them in somewhere. We need a new dormitory or two very much indeed. Maybe someone will give us one if they see men hanging out the window-sills by their eye-lashes. We can always get a room somewhere, on the campus or off, for the right sort of freshman.

3. BISHOP MANNING, OF NEW YORK, at a great dinner on May 16, which marked the beginning of his episcopate, told over a thousand people assembled at the Waldorf that there were five things which made up the chief aims of that episcopate, as follows: the promotion of the Nation-Wide Campaign; the endowment of the Bishops of the diocese; the paying of living wages to the clergy; the adequate maintenance of St. Stephen's College; and the building of the nave of the Cathedral.

It is a thing for which all St. Stephen's men ought to give thanks that the new Bishop has so wisely, definitely, and lovingly recognized and endorsed us. It means much to us. It is a challenge to us.

Yours cordially,

[Signature]

President.
