ROOM DRAW HOLDS PROMISE

By Andy Abbatepalo

There is a problem with housing here at Bard. More destructive than SAGA, and less tranquil than tricking showers, is a contition that demands correction). It is persistent and difficult to deal with and/or evaluate. It is Tewsbury, avoided by all rational sophisticated and upper-class students, and forced upon incoming freshmen for whom there is no other choice.

People who have lived there complain about, or at least discuss their dissatisfaction with, certain traits of Tewsbury. It has come to define recent years.

"It's a zoo.
"' Basically scruffy.
"A cross between a cell-block and a motel.
"Unnatural social atmosphere caused by single sex floors."

And so on.

Living in such an environment, whether or not the freshmen are absolutely, or even partially true, then we must ask ourselves, is this the wisest policy to fill the building with newcomers, coping with re-orientation both socially and academically, whose first experience at Bard will be included being housed in the most unpopular dormitory, both because of its inherent nature as well as its difterence with Bard housing. Or is it that Tewsbury is what it is being lived.

Tewsbury's full capacity is ninety ( thirty singles and thirty doubles). Place eighty some odd people, all going through some sort of transition and change in a new environment, in what the are told upon arrival is the worst dorm on campus, and then deprive them of the normal level of social interaction ( whatever that may be) with those who know, meaning experienced returning students, and they are undoubtedly fable to behave in a different manner than is generally accepted or preferred. Consequently, Tewsbury is a world in and of itself, noisy and rambunctious, and not conducive or appealing to most non-freshman students pursuing a different lifestyle. Indeed, not even acceptable, in most instances, to the freshmen who are compelled to live there. Their displeasure, in turn, cannot and does not exert any positive influence on the overall atmosphere.

This is reflected in the favorable reception peer counselors have received from Tewsbury freshmen this past year. It is also reflected in the fact that, whereas in previous years Associate Dean of Students, Theo Jolosky, has been beleaguered with requests and demands by Tewsbury residents to be moved elsewhere this year, he reports very few such incidents, which he feels is a demonstration of the improvements in freshman orientation and a lessening of turmoil due to the intrusion of social and advisory interaction between freshmen in Tewsbury and peer counselors. If there is something that Tewsbury peer counselors can bring about such improvement, imagine integrating thirty or more non-freshmen into the Tewsbury population.

The key process of formulating a proposal to the Dean's Office by which a system of incentive(s) could be set up to get freshmen to pick a room in Tewsbury was ( May 16), the argument employed thus far in this article was presented informally to about two dozen students. They unanimously endorsed the probability that it was correct in most of its assumptions. On the other hand, they were reticent themselves about moving into Tewsbury. Clearly, a reward, of sorts, for this "sacrifice" was called for, if any substantial number of students were to be expected to draw rooms in Tewsbury for next year. Their suggestions, as well as ideas already worked out but were brought to Theo, and the following program was worked out.

The first stage of the program involves physical improvements and regulatory modifications concerning Tewsbury itself. Over the summer, it will be cleaned thoroughly, and then repainted. Other necessary repairs, as usual, will be made as called for. One of the three floors will be made officially coed, and possibly two, if student response warrants it. The problems concerning the showers will be looked into, especially at Tewsbury and Stone Row, where the greatest inconvenience and hardship has been invoked. Finally, when and if there is a waiting list for installation of cable TV in dormitories, all existing prospect under consideration. Theo Jolosky promises to do everything he can to get Tewsbury peer counselors to do what is possible, especially concerning the adequate lounge/living room and high population of Tewsbury. Students may also be interested to know, if they do not already, that there are two pianos and practice rooms in the basement of Tewsburyilled there by the music department.

The second stage of the program involves the specific incentive provided for the purpose of attracting students to Tewsbury in the fall. Any student selecting a room in Tewsbury for next year will be given first pick of his class in the following year's room draw. In this way, two obstacles are surmounted: more non-freshman will be living in Tewsbury, and more freshmen will be distributed among the college community at large. Also, this system is fair to all students in that smallest impact a group of fifteen sophomores and fifteen juniors ( picking as seniors first in their class the following year ) will have when they draw first a year from this fall will be offset by the positive effect their elimination from this fall's room draw will have. Reduced competition this year will be balanced by a proportionate increase next year. In order to judge the extent of student interest, and also to enable students considering moving into Tewsbury under this program to see who else is ( as well as how many others are ) reacting to the incentive as they are, a separate Tewsbury Room Draw will be held before the full room draw. It will still be possible for students to draw rooms in Tewsbury, as they are still available, at the full room draw.

Under this program, it is hoped that the level of student interest will increase. At some point there will have improved to at least the level enjoyed at other dormitories at Bard tonight. At some point, the Senate committee will be discussed and possibly voted on.
If you are interested, please attend.

On February 26, a student's car was towed from its disabled position on the outdoor basketball court behind South Hall. The car had been on the court for about a half hour while its owner was attempting to repair it. "The Parking lot was too messy and ( had ) fixed my shifter," said the student.

For reasons both obvious and posted, parking on the basketball court is neither legal nor desirable. That many officers agree on, but concerned basketball team members requested that a large, massive, and heavily treated tow truck ascend the court and remove the compact car at the owner's expense of $26.50. ("They wanted to push the car into the swamp," a bystander remarked.) But as the basketball court is neither an emergency equipment nor a delivery area, the violation did not warrant towing which was the second opinion.

The Student Judicial Board (SJB) was of a similar opinion and recommended that Bard Security, re-pay the student for towing costs.
Things are seldom so easily resolved and this case was no exception.
After several weeks of what resembled useless wandering from secu-ry, who had responsibility, to the Dean of Students, to the Business Manager, all three offices agreed that the towing was illegal for technical reasons, but none was prepared to redress the grievance. In fact Business Manager, William Asip, communicated to the student that there was no possible redress on the money on the grounds that the towing company was a private security act. Later the Business Manager told the OBSERVER that he was opposed to redress on the grounds that money on the grounds that he was "reluctantly" refused to the student, and they all lived happily ever after. But why did all this take two months, when the SJB ruled the act illegal three days after the event?
The SJB has only the power to make decisions and recommend action to the administration. Those recommendations are attended to and followed, says William Asip, "if they (the SJB) make a legiti-mate decision." The judgments must be made in other words, and the plaintiff can only hope that the conclusion of the POWERS THAT BE is consistent with what over favorable recommendations that the SJB might be able to make system, as shown in the case mentioned here, can hardly be objectively provide equity or fairness to the community.
For this reason the constitutional revisions committee, first undertook the constitutional redraft of the role of the judicial arm of the student government. Having met once this semester, the committee's goals are fairly long-ranged. "Probably not this year," said committee member Stu L(Posh). "The changes to be made have not materialized. Among other suggestions being made is to establish a committee of administrators and students to make the rules, and likewise, a joint judicial board.
At the very least, Low says, while the administration may be in, the decisions, the present board should be able to make absolute decisions, rather than tossing recommendations up to the next layer of judges. Low stressed the importance of these and other constitutional changes and hopes for extension of the committee's success next semester.

The above editorial appeared in The Bryn Mawr Haverford College News on April 20th to voice their concern regarding the proposed police program. We say again, "if you want to end war and stuff you gotta sing loud!" (The next time it comes around on the guitar.)

We at the OBSERVER asked Gene Mason why he had not consulted the Educational Policies Committee, the Faculty Senate, and the Student Senate regarding what he was proposing. We realized that there are no written guidelines regarding the EPC should be consulted. He would like to see more specific written procedures. Specific guide lines are all well and fine and we agree they should be written down. But more than that we need administrators who "know" when to go to, to the rest of the community. It is a shame and a disgrace that the administration has to be watched by written rules like a five year old who cannot go across the street by himself.

It is not necessarily pragmatic, expedient to instantaeous beauracracies into this institution. We submit that added words get in the way of the ideas they represent. What is expedient is to have administra tors responsible to community concerns.

From "Alice’s Restaurant Massacre" by Arlo Guthrie.

CHAPTER VIII

THE HIGHEST good is like that of water. The profundity of water is that it benefits the thousand creatures; yet itself does not scramble, but is content with the places that all men disdain. It is this that makes water so near to the Way. And if men think the ground the best place for building a house upon, when among thoughts they value those that are profound, if in friendship they value gentleness, in deeds; ruth; in government, good order; in deeds, effectiveness; in actions, time, integrity; in each case it is because they prefer what does not lead to strife, and therefore does not go amiss.

TAO TÉ CHING

Several decisions he has made have been, ideological. We have had our share of disagreements. Always, though, he appeared to be working for the students (unlike Botstein and Mason who work for themselves also). This intangi ble approach to the job is what is most needed and is most lack ing in Ludlow. Theo Jolosky, we don’t think, ever forgot this aspect of his job. Many persons working in the administration seem to for get that the function of “infiltration” is to act as a tool for the betterment of its members. That is it only a tool and not an end in itself.

Bard is on the verge of far reaching changes: changes that will carry the school toward ends we can only imagine. If this institution is to retain the atmosphere of a small community, if this institution is to treat its faculty and students as integral parts of the community, if the institution is to finally recognize its enormous potential then the leadership must work for the community first.

Even though we agree with Theo Jolosky that it is time for him to leave, we are afraid that his absence will perhaps allow for a further steam-rolling by that small group now Ludlow. Several respected and influential faculty will also not be here as they take their well earned savaticas. A new person is going to have to learn all the ropes in this very fast paced atmosphere.

We wish Dean Jolosky our best. We hope that Mary Sugat and the search committee will be able to find another person who will "not consent in our admissence on my gate."

Cathy awoke to find herself managed to Selle, the cabbie. She was still in her nightshirt, and she and Selle were chained to a five-foot fence. Cathy was sobbing, as the cabbie-passers-by took no notice of them.

One man, dressed in a blue three-piece worsted suit, stepped to ask Cathy the time.

"Excuse me," he asked politely, "but would one any chance happen to know it?"

Cathy was astonished that she should be, and she who had undressed her she had been in her nightshirt thoroughly. She saw no reason for leaving the room, much less a sense of apology, for she would have known it. "No, not now," she said.

"Well, it is the time," he enquired, "for he is not upstairs and I must get him, and... and... a few minutes. I really must be gone! So Miss Steve, shall I wait for you?"

"Burlap," she said, "just a minute, Miss Steve!"

He had found the cabbie shoes glinting in the sunlight, briefly, and he had said, "Miss Steve! Help me! Please..."

"What?" he said, but he did not at any rate look back.

"Come back! You don't leave me like this!"

Almost too late to preserve her sanity, she watched him vanish into the dense jungle, his phill helmet resting itself on his head, his hands covering his eyes to see whether he was there.

She continued to scream as Cathy turned her attention to the woman. She was standing in the middle of a crowd of people, staring at the sky. The sun was shining brightly, and the sky was clear.

"Hello, are you feeling better?"

Cathy nodded, tears streaming down her face.

"I'm sorry to hear you're not feeling well."

"I'm fine, thank you," she replied, trying to sound cheerful.

"Would you like some water?"

"No, thank you," she said, her voice quivering.

"Will you be needing anything else?"

"No, just a moment of your time, please.

"Thank you."
Suffernburg Seminary, Borington, New York, is a recog- nized graduate school of a catalyzed loss of muscle power following a strong emotional stimulus, interna- tion, and narcolepsy (condition characterized by attacks of deep sleep). Its inaugural convocation was held on September 27, 1977. The Seminary is a study center of inter-racial and international stature. Students in the Master of Hypnology Education Program study the basic positions of major world sages; understand the meaning of contemporary languishment in relation to the denying principle, the main teaching of the Suffernburg Church. "Wasn't me! I was asleep the whole time!" June 15 of 1978 these three billion students will comprise the first graduating class. The great will communicate the meaningful of pillory-dribbling and the denying principle effectively, yawning, blinking, and drawing up from cramped, stooping or relaxed positions. Suffernburg Seminary provides total release from theology, philosophy, Biblical studies, church history, practical and legal obligations and all contemporary world affairs. It is the methodology of a good-life's rest. The Seminary aims to prepare men and women for international leadership. Leaders must be able to view both the personal and the public and the future not in the flesh, but in total darkness of a relationship to no one and nothing in particular. Leaders will serve as blinds between absent-mindedness, ignorant peace and dreadful awareness.

PROGRAM OF STUDY
Non-curriculum, unpestered. However, the program is cushioned enough to meet the needs of the complex of horizontal and vertical positions. An additional Master of Learning Program has been discarded due to utter lack of observance of the near future.

STUDENT LIFE
Living on the back of seminary life are the dreaming groups of happy sleepers. Essential to the achievement of the seminary's goals is a high level of administration where sleepy sleepers are not connected with formal course, work, or any form of life, for that matter. On rolling over, a student once was quoted as saying, "Sleep is a condition in which I refuse to have anything to do with the outer world and have all my damn dream interest from it. I go to sleep by retreating from the outer world and ward off the stimulus preceding from it." He yawned without movement or change of position. "At any rate, I try to bring about some similar conditions - warmth and darkness and absence of stimuli characteristic of that state. Some of us grow up not belonging in the world, but only by one-tenth; nine-tenths of us have never yet been born at all!" A relationship to Almighty, infinitesimal to mean- ingless relationships with others. Students meet each day morning, but aren't sure why. They are encouraged and counselled in developing a rich, personal relationship with Dull. Effort is made to create a king-sized bed conducive to maybe individual, but never interpersonal, boredom.

Supplementing the rich academic program are numerous shut-eye activities; sports, farming drama, photography, and painting. Horseback riding and fishing were available, but lack of interest led to deliberate, duty, and ruthless fishing worms. Heartless, brain- less and unappealing students mature for the dull-centered experience through an articulate yarn.

THE LIBRARY
The library features a rapidly expanding book, microfilm and tape collection. While grey static is recorded and made available to students. Large scale expansion of library and isolation cultural is providing peace and tranquility for an increasing number of students. Growing at the rate of 2,000 books per month, the Seminary goal of 5 million volumes of conservative rhetoric will be reached by December of 1977.

Dedicated to providing the deepest possible sleep to the students, the Librarians work closely with the faculty and a student committee to build a library that re-reflects the hopes and dreams of the seminary as a whole and the individual students.

To facilitate the study of areas of particular interest, the SS library is assembling special collections in fields as American Theology and the History of Christianity in the Orient.

ANTI-CULTURAL AFFAIRS SERIES
An anti-cultural affairs series brings dowry museums, lecturers, and artists to the campus in order to sleep. In addition to these events, educational and cultural films are shown with such nonsense stories and interruptions that everyone can help by being bored. Students occasionally have the opportunity to attend de-cultural events at nearby colleges or in New York City.

FACULTY
As a new academic institution dedicated to inter-religious dialogue and discovery, the Suffernburg Seminary is in a unique position; prone. Both faculty and students have an opportunity for extensive sen- sory deprivation from a variety of perspective desexualization, complemented by the unifying insights of Suffernburg theology.

The faculty is striving for this innovative new seminary to be half-baked in their chosen field and to wonder of religious mission to the world. The present faculty is post-academic, lying in a spectrum of religious traditional traditions including Norman Cate, William Shoff- doxy, Reformed Prostration, Flea Church and Romantic Jewellism.

Processors and students of SS are joined in harmonious monotony with their common commitment to the grave vanishing point of the Seminary as a dead-as-doornails organism.

The Seminary is striving to appoint high qualified processors in accordance with its expansion programs.

An extensive digestive force regular brings notoriosn shorters in a wide variety of fields to SS.

ADMISSIONS
Faculty-Fyr students from 9 or 10 different notions comprised the first ass admitted to Master of Hypnology Education Program in September 1977.

Applicants who are not members of the Suffernburg Church are expected to attend a weekend seminar on Denying Principle con- ducted by the Seminary. The pur- pose of this seminar is to acquaint the applicant with the teachings and rituals of the Suffernburg Church.

A student who has attended any Master's Degree Program or seminary other than SS and com- pleted none or more credits can be considered for admission as a transfer student.

Admission Requirements:
1. A nocturnal Degree from an accredited college
2. A minimum cumulative average of...
3. Transcripts of college records
4. A personal, if requested
5. Scores on Graduate Record Examination and the Elastic Gratitude Test if molest.
6. For international students, the student must furnish proof of ability to read and write, and speak and understand English suffi- ciently while sleeping by taking the test of English as a Foreign Language... (Yawn)

Dear Dr. Bish,

My friend and I keep planning to do things but they never get done. Its kind of like she agrees to do something on the spur of the moment and then goes back on the plans we make. I try to relax and not let it hurt me, I try to see where she's coming from. Is there anything I can do to get her to consider [Here Dr. Bish spelled soup on your letter I hope the following is correct] what she really wants to do before she makes her plans? It seems as if she is not being honest with either me or herself, - your student.

Dear Student,

Maybe you're a little bit too busy about it. What good are plans anyway? Try not planning anything and see where it goes. As to honesty, perhaps she is being quite honest in finding the plan a bother. Sorry about the soup.

Dear Doctor,

It being near the end of school we would like to take advantage of this column to thank the janitors and maids the grounds men, and our Security friends. Your daily labor to allow us the free time for our studies is very much appreciated. -- Ward Manor and Annex Students Assoc.

Dear Dr. Bish,

What do you think has happened to someone at 21 years who feels too old for love, excitement, mature (I hope this is your worst mature hope) and feels like she will never find those things or that they will never come to her. What I am asking is what is the remedy? She feels her youth is gone, her hope (could not read this word, sorry) vitality. She sees others around her younger and realizes all she has missed it a strange dilemma for someone at 21. This has been digging at me for awhile. -- The Old One.

Dear Reader

Kind of a hard one, kid. To feel too old for love... Well, for one thing you're near the end of a confined and arduous school year--another thing, you are stepping from the world of childhood into... the Universe. You are also a citizen of a difficult age, a "time of uncertainty"... (Send for Dr. Bish pamphlet no. 301 Coming Out, free, the postbox.) I suspect you haven't missed too much and that in fact your life is now launched toward great adventure, wondrousness the like of which you've not yet tasted. Remedy? Quiet, stillness. Empty yourself of what you have been and become who you are. Methodiki See above free info, or come see Dr. Bish. Best luck to you!

Estemed Sir,

I can only humbly reply we - Roy and I — were indeed hungry. Roy was when I first met him a sickly child at best who could not really digest and assimilate even tolerate ordinary food. You can see the picture I enclose that he is now a bright-eyed dimpled cheeked young fellow... but we have fallen upon difficult times and have been obliged on occasion to take the advantage of the excellent local cuisine, without, as you point out, the opportunity to repay the magement. However, I believe we will long run able to set things right by perhaps offering to mix a quantity of our highly successful Elixir for the paying public.

As to the first matter, the title is admittedly unofficial - what harm. Frankly, I have always wanted to follow in the footsteps of my esteemed brother, Manfred (von) Bish, NY critic and lecturer. Somehow, while out west, I got side-tracked in some of the wild schemes of younger Billy, and never quite finished the dissertation. Since there remains only one more column before we all pack up, I sincerely hope the Board of Directors will take into consideration the few good deeds we may have accomplished and that upon our stay here as a not altogether unpleasant affair.

Yours most respectfully,

William R. Bish

STOLEN LUNCHES

Dear "Doctor",

It has come to my attention, through various academic channels, that your PhD title is a purely fictitious product of your own imagination. Furthermore, last week a letter from "before Foods, Inc.," was passed along to my desk concerning an alleged attempt on your part, along with one of your student followers to person known only by the name of Roy, to procure 2 free lunches. I believe you were overheard to say, "we have only one more month here, Roy." And when apprehended, remarking merely, "We were hungry... " My dear Sir! The ignomy of it! I really expect some kind of explanation. -- yours Sincerely, E. E. Rothchild, mem- ber, Board of Directors.
