EPISTLE TO A GODSON AND OTHER POEMS

W.H. AUDEN
W.H. AUDEN

EPISTLE
TO A GODSON
and Other Poems

RANDOM HOUSE NEW YORK
CONTENTS

Epistle to a Godson • 3

The Art of Healing • 7

Lines to Dr. Walter Birk • 10

A New Year Greeting • 12

Smelt and Tasted • 15

Heard and Seen • 16

I Am Not a Camera • 17

A Bad Night • 19

Moon Landing • 21

The Garrison • 23
SMELT AND TASTED

The nose and palate never doubt
Their verdicts on the world without,
But instantaneously condemn
Or praise each fact that reaches them:
Our tastes may change in time, it's true,
But for the fairer if they do.

Compared with almost any brute,
Our savouring is less acute,
But, subtly as they judge, no beast
Can solve the mystery of a feast,
Where love is strengthened, hope restored,
In hearts by chemical accord.
What is Death? A Life disintegrating into smaller simpler ones.

• • •

It is the unimportant who make all the din: both God and the Accuser speak very softly.

• • •

God never makes knots, but is expert, if asked to, at untying them.

• • •

Does God ever judge us by appearances? I suspect that He does.
Instinctively passive, I guess, having neither fangs nor talons nor hooves nor venom, and therefore too prone to let the sun go down upon your funk, a poor smellor, or rather a censor of smells, with an omnivore palate that can take hot food.

Unpredictably, decades ago, You arrived among that unending cascade of creatures spewed from Nature’s maw. A random event, says Science. Random my bottom! A true miracle, say I, for who is not certain that he was meant to be?

As You augmented and developed a profile, I looked at your looks askance. His architecture should have been much more imposing: I’ve been let down! By now, though, I’ve gotten used to your proportions and, all things considered, I might have fared far worse.

Seldom have You been a bother. For many years You were, I admit, a martyr to horn-colic (it did no good to tell You—But I’m not in love!): how stoutly, though, You’ve repelled all germ invasions, but never chastised my tantrums with a megrim.

You are the Injured Party for, if short-sighted, I am the book-worm who tired You, if short-winded as cigarette addicts are, I was the pusher who got You hooked. (Had we been both a bit younger, I might well have mischiefed You worse with a needle.)

I’m always amazed at how little I know You. Your coasts and outgates I know, for I govern there, but what goes on inland, the rites, the social codes, your torrents, salt and sunless, remain enigmas: what I believe is on doctors’ hearsay only.